The Socialization of Girls in the United States Today

Do You Work With Adolescent Girls? Author Seeking Input For Next Book

Stillwater, OK—January 31, 2006

Local author Allyn Evans is working on book number two. This time she's changing her focus from women to adolescent girls. Still in the research stages, Evans is actively seeking interviews from individuals who work closely with adolescents in rural, suburban and urban settings. Specifically, Evans is interested in sharing with others the experience of being an adolescent today.

"Already, I have scheduled interviews with psychologists in Chicago and Texas. These interviews will be conducted by telephone. Additionally, I plan to send written questionnaires to others including counselors, therapists, and teachers in New York, Texas and Mississippi."

Ms Evans states, "Individuals who work directly with adolescents, specifically females, will find the results interesting. I know I have learned a great deal and am eager to share what I know." In March, Evans will be offering programs based on the information gathered to date and will gladly schedule programs free of charge to groups sponsored by volunteer participants or community members.

For now, Evans would love to hear from anyone interested in being interviewed. "The interviews take about an hour and are based on personal opinion. If anyone prefers a written questionnaire, that will work too!" She can be reached by calling 405-612-7782 or by e-mail through her website: www.queenpower.com/Evans/author.html.
